

Crow

Head cocked, inspecting a shiny piece of foil
It won't do.
Hopping to observe under the next bench -
A piece of cheese.
Delicious.

Perched atop an electric wire,
Beady black eyes fixed on the human below,
Munching on an edible delight.

As they are distracted by the sunset,
This stealthy avian creeps up from behind and snatches
A cracker from the bag.
Then another.
And another.
And another, yet.
All while several oblivious humans watch the sunset.
Now, fleeing away with its prize in its beak,
Over a hospital, and a home with a leak.
To a nest, having eaten well.

Satisfaction is hers.